

2017 COMMUNITY REPORT

Care for all women.

MAKING ALL THE DIFFERENCE: YEAR IN REVIEW

Patty Genday, BJ Leber

This has been an amazing year for Adagio Health. By the end of 2017 we were a much stronger organization than when we entered it. We have new medical offices as a result of partnerships with Renewal, Inc. and the Human Services Center Corporation in Turtle Creek. Our medical offices continue to provide high quality and compassionate care and same-day scheduling appears to be a hit with our patients. Our WIC (Women, Infants and Children) and Power Up programs continue to grow and we have established new relationships with community organizations such as 412 Food Rescue. Foundation support has been key to our efforts to rebuild and refocus. We have a newly-energized and dedicated Education Department and enthusiastic educators throughout the region. Our statewide cancer screening program and Komen-funded Mammogram Voucher Program are helping women receive mammograms. This year we will host our first-ever women's health policy symposium and continue efforts to expand medical services to new communities.

This success and momentum is because of the work of the entire Adagio Health team and the leadership and support of our Board of Directors, our Advisory Council and our Young Leadership Council. It is because of the support of our funders and donors. And it is because of our great community partners who work with us to help our neighbors live healthier lives.

2018 is a year of unending possibilities. With your continued support assistance, Adagio Health will work to ensure that the women we serve receive healthcare they deserve and need. Thank you for your support in 2017. We look forward to 2018 and beyond.

“I came to Adagio Health as a very scared sixteen-year-old, having no clue how to grapple with my sexuality in my conservative environment. It was there that I learned my sexuality is something to be celebrated, a part of myself that I ought to understand rather than reject. I received my first birth control at Adagio Health and learned how to protect myself, body and spirit, in the face of sexuality. Six years later, I am still bringing my friends to Adagio Health so they too can have control over their sexual lives. Thank you, Adagio Health!”

ADAGIO HEALTH POLICY & ADVOCACY AGENDA

We are working with legislators in Harrisburg and Washington, D. C. to ensure that women in western Pennsylvania have access to healthcare that is vital to their wellbeing including breast & cervical cancer screening, nutrition, contraception and clinically accurate sexual and reproductive health education. We believe that strengthening policies that benefit women in the Commonwealth will help to make Pennsylvania stronger. We perform this important work through our.....

Western Pennsylvania Women's Healthcare Consortium

FOCUS ON OUR PARTNERS WHO MAKE ALL THE DIFFERENCE

Opioid Community Outreach Initiative

Through a generous grant from the R.K. Mellon Foundation, Adagio Health established a Opioid community outreach initiative in partnership with UPMC Womens Hospital and Allegheny Health Network to target women in their reproductive years. The project will ensure access to quality family planning services for Allegheny County women and men, and specifically, pregnant women who are struggling with addiction. As a community-collaborative, Adagio Health will leverage partnerships with numerous Allegheny County organizations experienced in providing treatment to women and men struggling with drug addiction.

HPV Education and Outreach

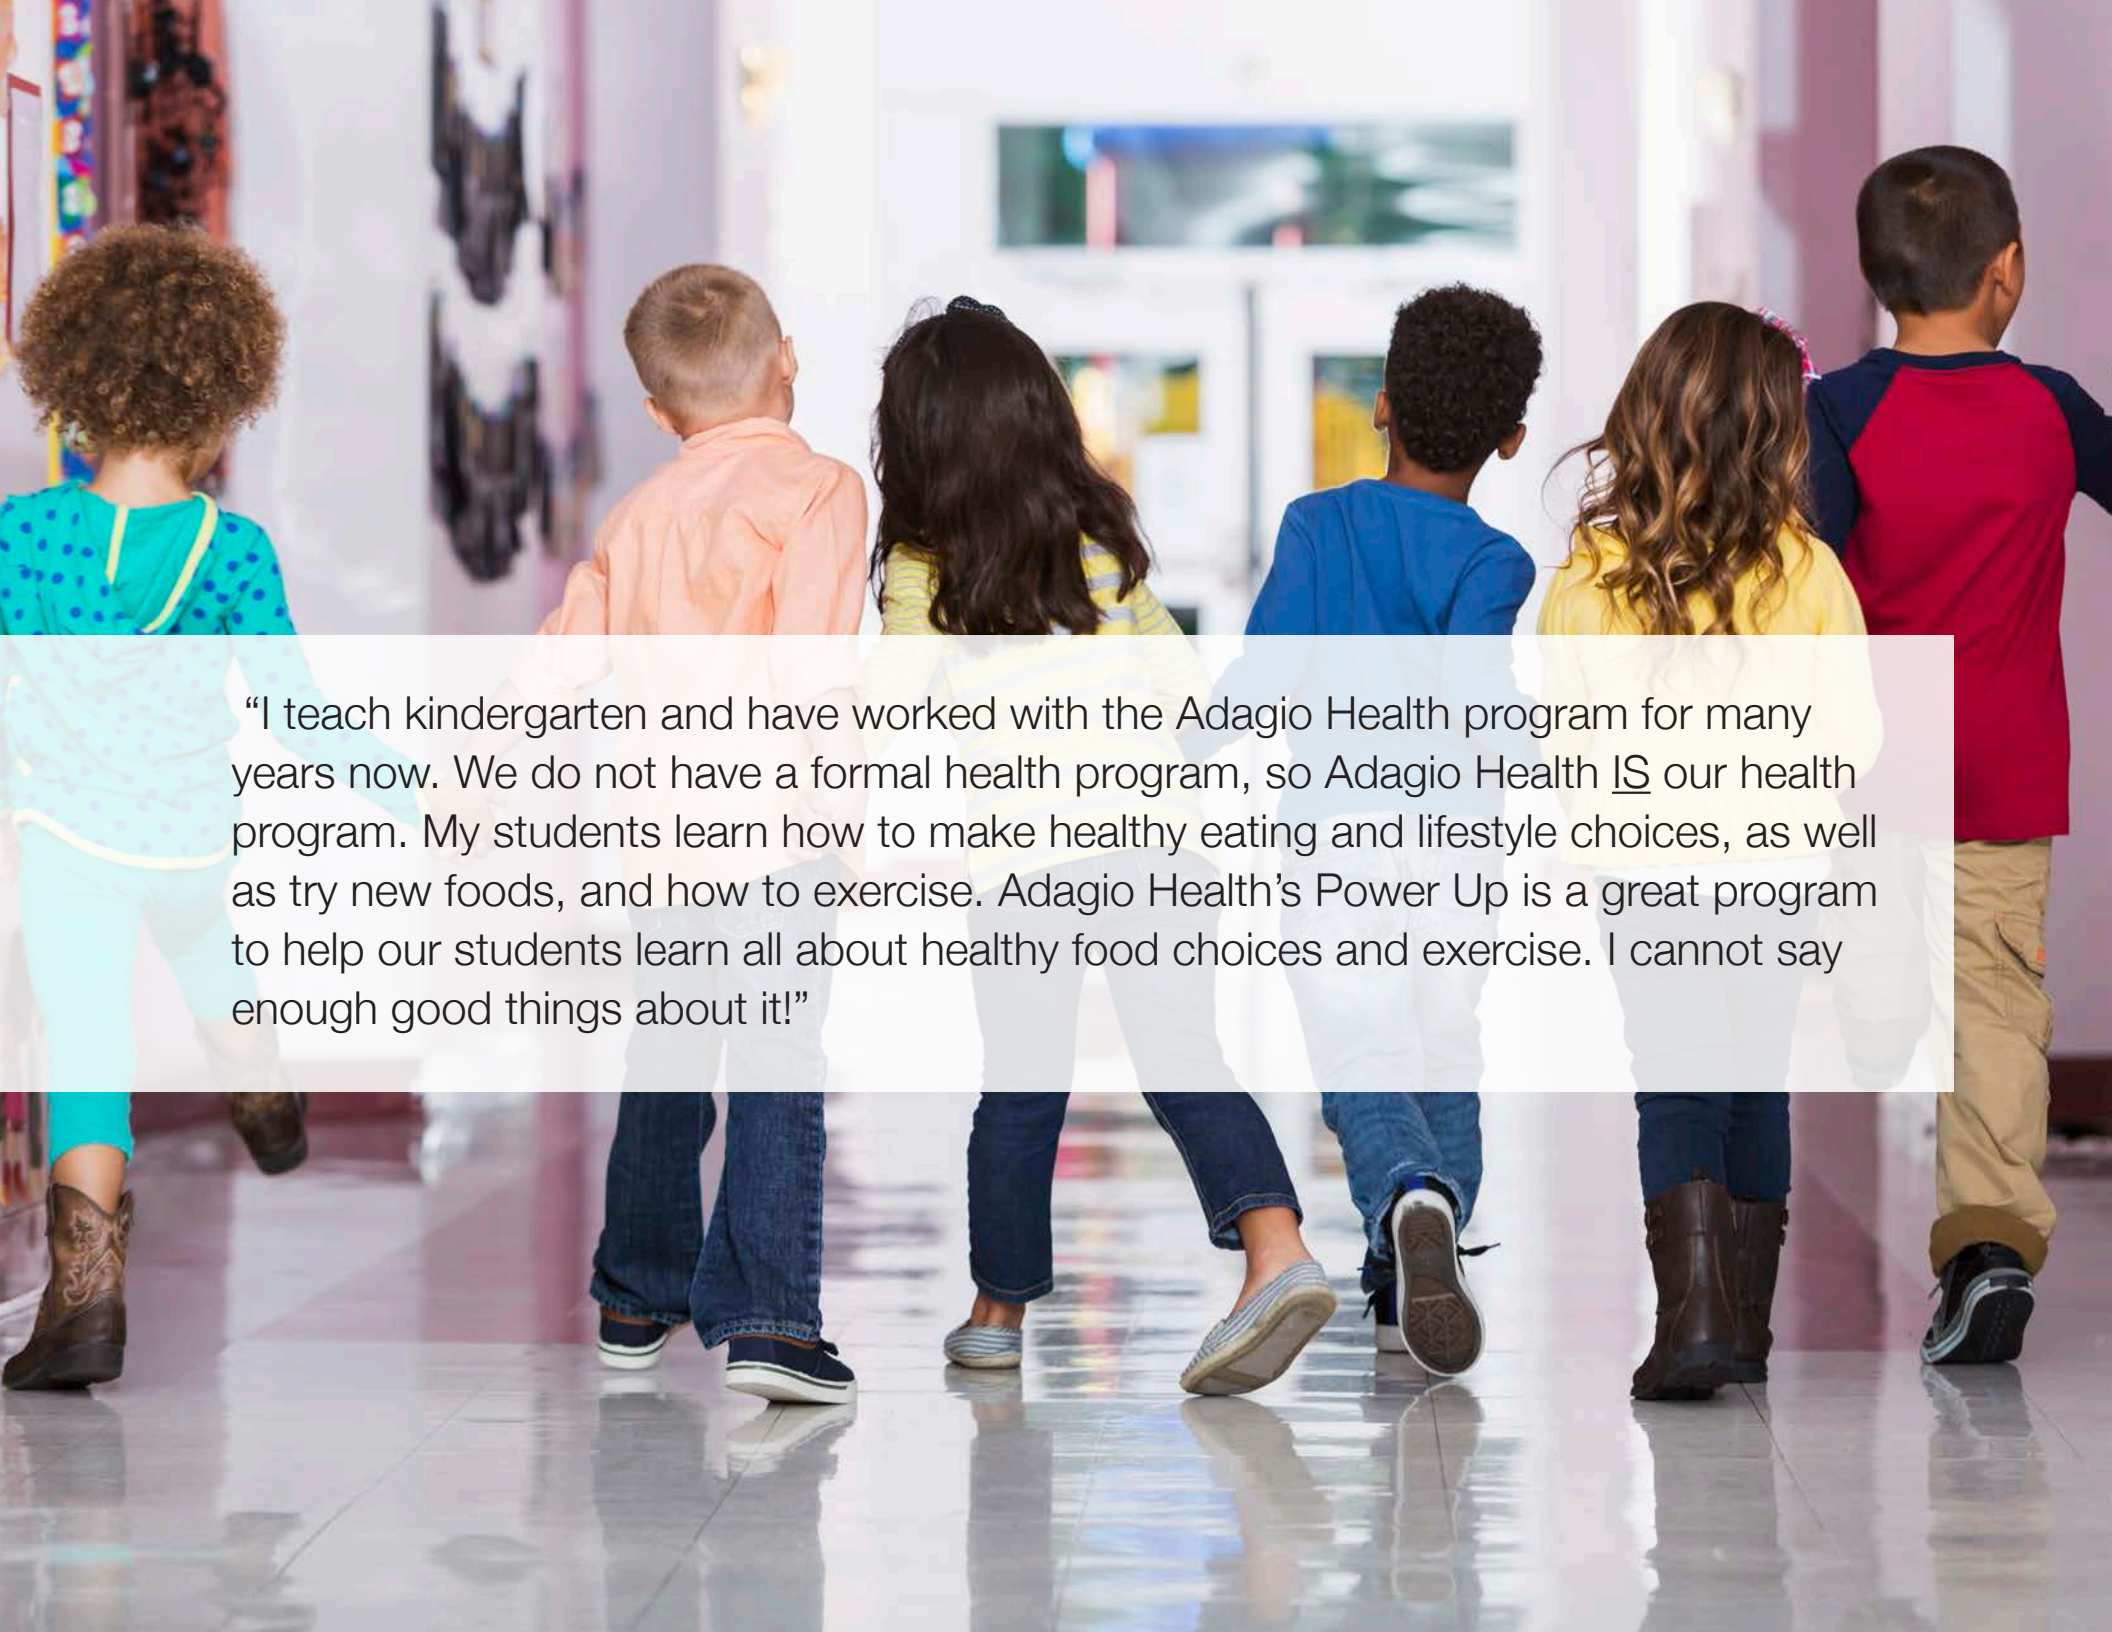

The Jewish Healthcare Foundation awarded Adagio Health a grant to implement and expand HPV education and outreach. This initiative specifically focuses on children ages 9-11 and 12-24 who have not received the HPV vaccine. Adagio Health provides education and outreach through disseminating HPV materials in medical offices and to community partners, creating partnerships with school districts in 23 counties and training health educators on how to include the HPV vaccine in their sexual health curriculum.

Mammogram Voucher Program

Since 2009, Adagio Health has been the grant recipient of the Susan G. Komen Pittsburgh Mammogram Voucher Program.. The program, provides free screening and diagnostic breast services in partnership with hospital partners throughout our region. Diagnostic breast services covered by the program include mammograms, breast ultrasounds, and breast biopsies. Providing these services free of charge leads to early detection and reduces breast cancer, in the state of Pennsylvania.

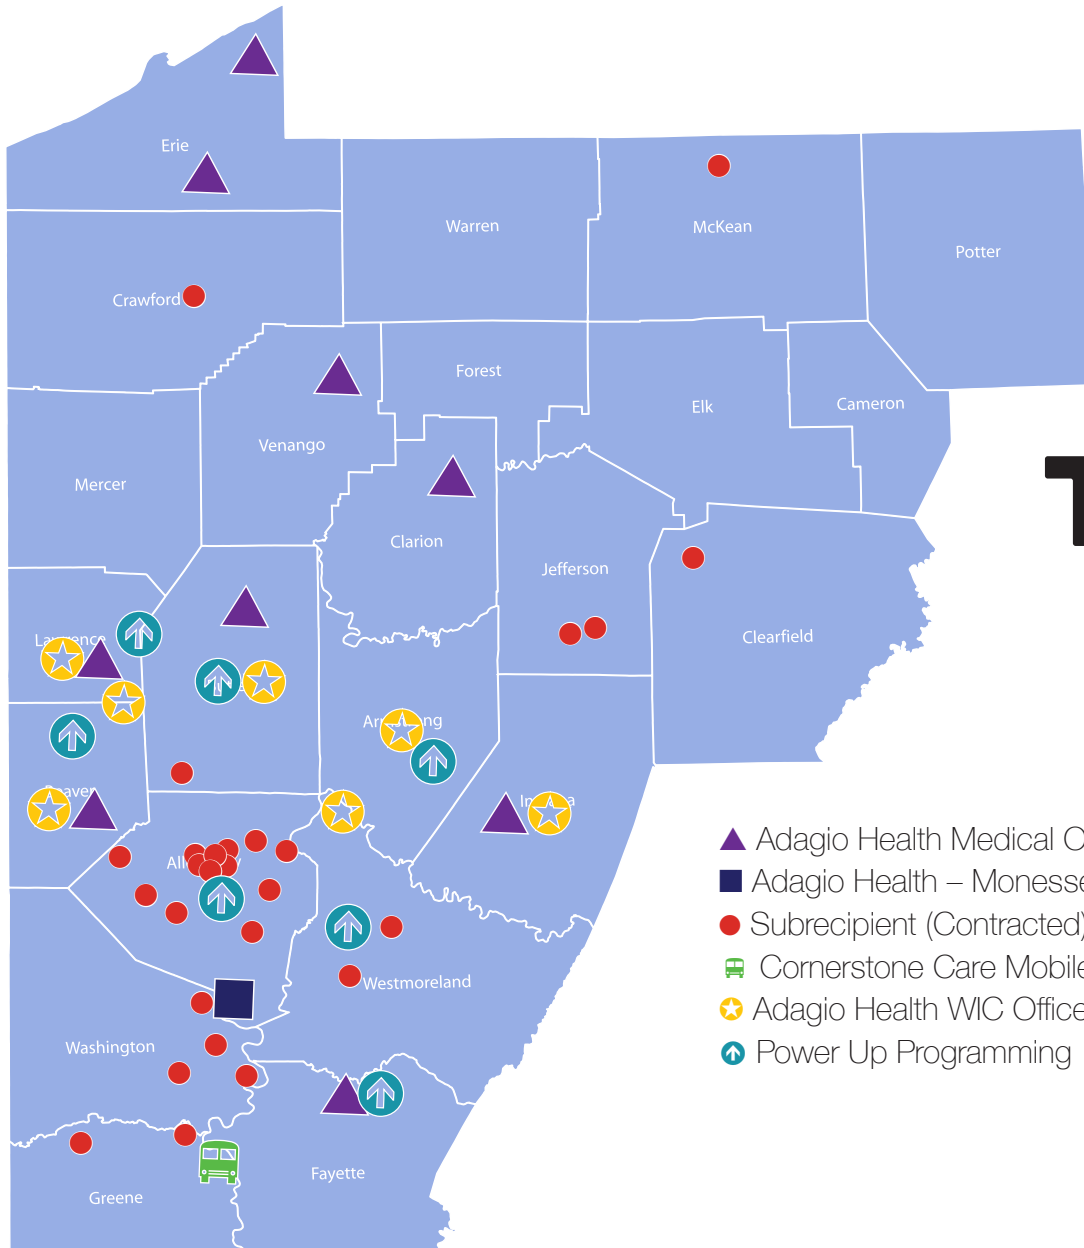

Health Education

Since 2013, Adagio Health has been collaboratively working with the Propel Schools since to provide a variety of evidence-based curriculums to students who are in sixth through eleventh grades regarding healthy decision making, safe relationships and medically accurate pregnancy prevention information. The Adagio Health relationship with Propel Charter Schools is one that promotes the wellbeing of our communities and allows student in our region to make informed decisions that empower them to take control of their lives and their futures

“I teach kindergarten and have worked with the Adagio Health program for many years now. We do not have a formal health program, so Adagio Health IS our health program. My students learn how to make healthy eating and lifestyle choices, as well as try new foods, and how to exercise. Adagio Health’s Power Up is a great program to help our students learn all about healthy food choices and exercise. I cannot say enough good things about it!”
